Authentic expression presenting itself as an inevitable presence: that is the artistic goal for me. And a well-crafted surface is mandatory.

The painter Robert Ryman states it beautifully:

The one quality I look for and I think is in all good painting, is that it has to look as if no struggle was involved. It has to look as if it was the most natural thing – it just happened and you don't have to think about how it happened. It has to look very easy even though it wasn't.
